TheChandelier in Gran Canaria

View online version

The Gran Canarian town of Gáldar is distinguished not only by its vibrant cultural activism but also by hosting an annual International Film Festival. In line with this interest, the city recently opened the Guaires Cultural Center, a former 1950s cinema that has been meticulously restored thanks to the initiative of the island's public institutions.

The renovation has managed to modernize the space without sacrificing its rich history, preserving its mid-century essence. Structural and decorative elements inspired by 1950, the year the former 'Cine Guaires' opened, have been carefully selected, thus paying visual homage to the refined and elegant style of that era.

ALMA Light has contributed three imposing pendants from TheChandelier collection, which illuminate one of the halls along with stylish pieces of furniture and art. TheChandelier is characterized by its large size, aesthetic impact, soft shapes and original design, featuring ovoid opal glass shades and iron structures with a polished brass finish that convey a sense of strength and solidity.

We love this project. What about you? What do you think?
